GOURMET GUYS raise bread

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS!

- Amateur chefs (guys only) prepare samplings of one of their terrific specialties (tiny bites) for about 150 guests. There are many categories to choose from, so the competition is serious stuff!
- The “chefs” bring their prepared food to the La Habra Community Center on event Sunday.
- Each chef has half of a 6’ table to work on. They set up a small presentation (showing one plated serving) for judging. They have their dish ready to serve at noon (plates, plastic-ware, signage are provided).
- From 11:00 a.m. to 12 noon the doors are closed to the public, and each dish is judged by 3 professional chefs. Each professional chef judges the dishes on difficulty, originality, taste and eye appeal.
- The score sheets are sent for tallying – while that is happening the public enters and samples the yummy dishes, shops the silent auction, takes chances on the raffles and has a great time.
- When the scoring is completed, the results are announced in the various categories and the winners are presented with medals. The auction and raffle winners are announced and the event is done!

This is a fun way to spend a Sunday afternoon!
A bar and a Silent Auction help round out the day!

Professional chefs are asked to donate this 1-2 hours of time to come and judge, give suggestions and admire the efforts of the guys. Judges admission is complementary and judges are welcome to stay, sample more tasty bites and bid on auction items.

The public is invited in at 12 noon. Tickets are $40.00.
